Helen R. Ralph

The first part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the English language. It is argued that the study of the history of the English language is not only a matter of historical interest, but also a matter of practical importance. The study of the history of the English language can help us to understand the development of the English language, and it can help us to understand the relationship between the English language and other languages.

The second part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the English language. It is argued that the study of the history of the English language is not only a matter of historical interest, but also a matter of practical importance. The study of the history of the English language can help us to understand the development of the English language, and it can help us to understand the relationship between the English language and other languages.

The third part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the English language. It is argued that the study of the history of the English language is not only a matter of historical interest, but also a matter of practical importance. The study of the history of the English language can help us to understand the development of the English language, and it can help us to understand the relationship between the English language and other languages.

The fourth part of the paper discusses the importance of the study of the history of the English language. It is argued that the study of the history of the English language is not only a matter of historical interest, but also a matter of practical importance. ~~~~~ Dearest Helen,
been a swell roommate,
and I will miss you this summer. Try to come to hogan to see me, for I would love to have you. I will write to you this summer, believe it or not. Be good, and all of that stuff. (except one part
"Anne," which is for "George.")
all my love,
"Anne."

We present the 1942 National: an appropriately gay and poignant record of events, which were crammed into a year when the word "security" became obsolete and the word "courage" was recoinced. As women, we marched not grimly, nor with guns, but steadily, humming a cheerful refrain to keep in tune with the times.

ADMINISTRATION

ADMINISTRATION

Edna Dean Baker, President

Out of a fabulous stack of names, records, and financial reports, National's administration competently creates an amazing semblance of order to keep the wheels of the college speeding smoothly throughout the year. Daily, the office of administration is confronted with the usual queries regarding matriculation, course of study, and various permissions. In this capacity, the administrators have made National an outstanding school in the educational field and have aided in obtaining for the school the long desired accreditation by the American Association of Teachers' Colleges.

THE FACULTY

They made books alive, life easier, and laughs heartier—the Faculty of National. Initiating the year, old and new students became acquainted or reacquainted with each member of the staff at Miss Baker's teas, class teas, and assemblies. In their advisory capacity the faculty helped with teaching assignments, courses of study, and yearly class programs.

After the preliminaries were over the staff settled down to the main business of the year: trying to instill a little knowledge into the student body, as well as sponsoring classes and clubs.

Uniquely, this year they also directed defense activities for the school, as several members were representatives at defense classes in Chicago. Sirens were installed, and classes were frequently interrupted with air raid drills complete with "all clear" signals for National's preparedness. Many were the evenings when the dignified faculty could be found swathed in white bandages, or prostrate on the floor, while a cohort frantically administered artificial respiration—all for the Red Cross First Aid class. Often, at faculty meetings, there was a note of impatience as the members waited eagerly to report to Mr. Bo's shop for craft work; during the year they produced amazing things from cans and orange crates.

Adhering to the social adage "All work . . ." the faculty contributed much to National's social whirl. Attired festively in their "best", they attended the Thanksgiving and Christmas formal dinner parties at the dormitory and joined in the after dinner singing. From the sublime to the ridiculous marched the "teach" to the

All-School dinner in the most unsmooth attire he or she could muster midst much hilarity from an appreciative student body. At Hoot-Nanny a faculty dramatic cast thrilled a rapt student audience with their sultry Latin-American "mellow drama."

As the year rolled along toward its close there was the Senior-Faculty dinner at which mutual tributes were given. The "funny faculty" scored again in their choric tribute to the seniors which was so "lustily" rendered. They again joined the seniors at graduation time, and, collecting their caps and gowns and hoods from moth balls, solemnly preceded the seniors to the last milestone of the year.

THE SENIOR STORY

Seniors scored again at last assembly.

From pioneers of four years and squatters of one year come tales of the fun crammed into that last fleeting year at National. It was the kind of fun, written in the annals of tradition, that always stirs nostalgia.

The senior assembly maintained the high reputation of undergrad years with a rollicking review at the expense of the faculty and of senior experiences of other years. Reminiscence and humor was the theme, laughter and pleasure the result.

The class was in the usual money dilemma of stretching a sadly depleted treasury to include the Prom, class gifts, and frequent frolics. To fill the money bag the potentialities of the bridge tea were discovered, which proved to be a social and financial triumph. Each girl supported the class treasury again when she purchased flowers for her mom and dad on Parents' Day.

The Senior-Faculty dinner at Shawnee Country Club began the cycle of activities that made the girls realize they were really seniors. The tunic-robed faculty entertained the class with a satirical lyric that lustily paid tribute to the roaring group.

May Festival to the seniors was more than an elaborate display, as the May Queen and her court were chosen from among the ranks.

The graduates were feted as guests of the A.C.E. and the Alumnae Association. Bids for the Junior-Senior breakfast started in the fall. In June each junior squirmed her favorite senior to a swanky brunch at the Georgian. That Saturday night at National was more than a coke or movie date; for that eve the Senior Prom was held at the Sunset Ridge Country Club. Uniforms and chiffon intermingled rhythmically.

Sunday, Baccalaureate! Wednesday, Graduation! As the Senior assembly suggested: Whether she accepted a "job or a gob" each girl entered her chosen future with the same determination for success with which she began her life as a National girl.

They obviously had something up their sleeves here.

THE JUNIOR STORY

This cultured cast won faculty and student approval.

Friendship, friendship was the tune the juniors hummed from start to finish this year. The grass hadn't grown under their feet, or rather the frost hadn't had a chance to cover it, before they had their first get-together around the fireplace to cook hamburgers.

Each month brought a cooperative supper: the dorm girls supplied the hot dishes, while the town girls brought the rest of the food needed for a complete dinner. These were followed by entertainment and games, and in response to a two spade bid one was likely to receive for an answer, "I Can't Give You Anything But Love" from the voices singing around the piano.

The juniors have proved to be normal college girls with their minds predominantly on food. Their Wednesday evenings have been occupied with making sandwiches, rather than studying. These have been sold in the dorm for the purpose of raising funds for the Junior-Senior breakfast, which gathering at the Georgian Hotel climaxed their year. Eating again!

They also lent moral support to the Army and Navy by concentrating on a Latin-American background for their Recreation Night. However, the high-light of their social whirl was the Prom held at the Edgewater Beach Hotel. It will long be remembered not only for the gaiety of the evening, but as the culminating event of peace in the United States. The next day found all in the realities of war, and the goodbyes of that week-end took on a more poignant note.

THE SOPHOMORE STORY

The noses have it.

All those who bought lunch at the dorm, nibbled a snack at the food sale, pinned a grinning colored mammy to a lapel, twirled around the gym floor in a bright Hawaiian lei, or pulled taffy and crunched popcorn during the Yuletide, helped to swell the treasury of the sophomore class!

All year this lively group was in the news by virtue of its innumerable, unique, and workable money-making devices. For efficiency plus, squads and shifts combined to serve the tasty meal to budget-watchers and money-makers alike one Saturday in March. The food sale netted an amazing amount from homemade sweets and pastries. This year's sophomores obviously were the personification of "pep".

A high spot in their program of activity was a tour of the United States, vicariously experienced through song and dance at the class assembly.

Spring loveliness, enhanced the Frosh-Soph Prom at the Moraine-on-the-Lake. Lucky girls with dates in uniforms obtained their bids at a reduced rate. The newest in swing, fashion, and fancies of youth was apparent at this gala affair. With decorations in a night club theme to carry out the gaiety of the evening, the girls and their escorts needed only soft lights and sweet music to make the evening complete.

Climaxing an unusual year, the sophomores continued the precedent established last year, that of making the participation in the Daisy Chain voluntary. Twenty-four girls carried daisies, while the remainder bore peonies. Everyone who came to bid the seniors farewell appreciated the beautiful ceremony. White and colors interlaced the chain of friendship, and pressed flowers filled the last page of a sophomore's diary.

Easier these days to do Hula in Sophomore assembly than Hawaii.

THE FRESHMAN STORY

Breezes on their backs and cameras in their faces

The freshmen arrived with their picnic appetites, and did justice to the hot dogs and cokes on their first excursion to Wilmette Harbor.

Following this outing, they assumed more serious duties, first, that of nominating officers at an informal dinner at Miss Gibson's home. At a luncheon in November the results of the election were revealed.

The Christmas spirit prevailed at the freshman dinner at the college. Candles in the form of white angels carried out the Yuletide theme in table decoration. Folk dancing led by Mr. Bo furnished entertainment, and each girl received a ten cent gift to spread Christmas cheer.

The class profited from a bake sale held just previous to Christmas vacation, for which town girls brought home-made bakery goods and dorm girls pooled their allowances to buy their share.

Silver blades flashed over Ackerman Pond at the freshman January skating party. Refreshments served later in the dorm date room warmed chilled fingers and toes.

The patriotic decorations at the frosh "Vic" dance spelled not only victory on the wall, but success for all those who attended.

An original political satire concerning international affairs asserted the class's ingenuity at the annual assembly. A five-year-old Hitler stole the show by snatching symbolical blocks from the United States, Russia and England, portrayed as kindergarteners.

The freshman class added another feather to their green beanie by collaborating with the sophomores in making their Prom an evening long to be remembered.

Freshman satired warring nations.

ACTIVITIES

COLLEGE COUNCIL

COLLEGE COUNCIL OFFICERS

The gavel resounded through President Baker's office. College Council was called to order with the impressive installation ceremony. In the fall this organization, composed of a group of representative students, took the oath to guide National through a successful year.

Crammed with requests, the council suggestion box was opened at every meeting and careful consideration given to each note. This year reams of questions concerning a smoking room for the College were pulled out. The council acted promptly in forming a committee to make a study of this problem. Its research produced a new idea, and in the near future National's campus will boast a recreation hall.

The booth sporting the National bracelets at the bazaar was also a project of the council. The bracelets were unanimously approved by the student body, for every one of them was sold.

Under the supervision of College Council, Christmas for the underprivileged was made gayer by attractive baskets sent to children at various settlement houses.

With all these activities, the council was still able to devote much of its time to Red Cross activities. The drive in the fall surpassed its quota, while a dessert bridge was both a social and financial success. Its functions were varied, as usual, and broad to meet the specific needs of a special year.

DORMITORY BOARD

Familiar scenes, characteristic of dorm life, are long to be remembered with much pleasure and wisps of sentiment. There was that mad dash to sign in on time when lights blinked for the two-minute-before-two warning. The Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners found faculty and students mingling in formals and tuxes. The Campus Box, never devoid of "late" excuses, brought many a headache to the Dorm Board. Hoot Nanny introduced prospects to local talent from each hall. Dark glasses, a radio, and a deck of cards were essentials for an afternoon's sunning on the roof. Candle light dinners on Thursday nights; "I Love You Truly", sung to one who had finally seen the light; the steady stream of telegrams before vacations; and flowers before dances—all spell Marienthal. P.S. Those midnight serenades to "Blooming Blushing Bride" stirred envy in every heart.

TOWN GIRL'S BOARD

Town girls had a hard time remembering business meetings because invariably an assembly ran over-time on their once a month Tuesday. However, they always recall social bridging in the T.G. room, coking in the cafeteria, or smoking in the parking lot between classes.

They couldn't forget the hilarious initiation of new members at the fall dinner. The old members provided the football theme, while the entertainment was at the expense of the initiates. Nor could they forget the T.G. traditional "whole roast pig" Christmas dinner, with Mr. Davis as Santa—or the big and little sister tea.

For their Red Cross contribution ambitious members knitted squares for the association's afghan, which was most attractive when finished.

A successful year culminated in a bridge luncheon at Shawnee Country Club in May with door prizes, score prizes 'n everything—busy, weren't they?

Not a "yes-gal" on the staff! All striking individualists, they managed to get together on a few things, such as that the book should be good and meetings should be on Thursdays. They proved worthy on the follow-through, worked hard in attempt to make it good and showed up for some of the meetings.

Of course there were calamities, like discovering at Easter-time that a Thanksgiving festival picture was lost; breaking the borrowed staff camera and having the official photographer desert to the army.

They felt professional plus when they visited the engravers on Saturday mornings and sat around the long conference table with host, Mr. Townes, and the company's art staff. Usually the meeting lasted so long that Mr. Townes had to escort the girls through the imposing photo-enlargement room to the freight elevator as the regular elevator boy had called it a day long before. However, though it was the freight elevator, Mr. Townes assumed the same hospitality that one might assume before a swank hotel entrance.

Finally, the book took shape. One morning was spent at the printer's—of course the dummy was forgotten and had to be retrieved. Endless proof-reading, identifying pictures, and pasting of the dummy kept the staff busy until that beautiful day when the book finally went to press!

Literary, photo, and business staffs stayed in the background, managing to escape the glory and griping that comes with publication. It is to these sufferers that the weary editors cast the makings of next year's book, a broken camera, and three sheets of paper.

Let's go to press! The dorm clock clangs out twelve bells as the night watchman noiselessly mounts two flights of stairs and turns down 3A. After a hasty reconnaissance, he continues his rounds under the assumption that all's well. But there is a sound of muffled voices and a glimmer of light from room 3—that he had overlooked. Through the half-open door and a dense haze of smoke five figures in various comfortable positions in the room are barely discernible. One is sprawled on the floor, another lounges on the bed, a third is draped over the arm of an easy chair, and the remaining two sit bolt upright in straight chairs typing.

This group of energetic workers comprised the illustrious Chaff staff, which on any Monday night prior to the releasing of an issue of the paper could have been found gathered in the editor's room, working hard to beat the deadline. With the presence of Mrs. Galvarro, chief adviser and critic, the staff put the paper to bed in the wee small hours with the aid of cokes to keep them awake.

Approximately every two weeks the paper came out; twelve issues in all. Staff and reporters covered school news for the week preceding publication. "Sally Dear" was a favorite column, the writing of which was greatly coveted by members of the staff. An innovation this year was the printing of pictures of outstanding senior girls, each accompanied by write-ups of interesting incidents in her life. Creative writing efforts were featured often including poems, short stories, and the essays of aspiring writers. The staff concluded with a luncheon get-together at which plans for next year were discussed.

THE Y. W. C. A.

In September at National ten candles were lit on Y Club's birthday cake. The anniversary year was launched with an all school get-acquainted tea.

When the fall meeting was held at the outdoor fire place, teacups were no longer needed to foster friendship. Each little sister reveled in stuffed hamburgers and the company of her wise big sister.

Since many girls did not have enough time for current affairs and books they displayed great interest in and appreciation for a stimulating review of Inside Latin America and Keys of the Kingdom by a professional lady of letters.

National's glamour gals fired eager questions concerning new shades of lipstick and sock-lengths at representatives from "Charm" magazine and the Lucien LeLong beauty salon. These experts offered many suggestions to help debutramps be smooth.

Y members did a big part in helping the Red Cross this year. At Christmas time they made big red stockings and filled them with candy for children that otherwise would have had no Christmas. Then, while some girls worked on baby blankets others kept fingers busy knitting sweaters and socks.

In March, fashion seekers and wishful thinkers found themselves at Y Club's spring style show. Spontaneous exclamations filled the auditorium as bright colors and new styles were paraded in review.

For Parents' Day assembly the Y Club entertained both parents and girls by importing a double octet from Great Lakes Naval Training Station, and by a speech on a current topic by Mr. Charles Davis.

So Y Club ended its tenth successful year at National. Its officers and members can be assured they have helped to build a foundation for future years.

A.C.E. lends a professional air to college activities. National boasts one of the most active A.C.E. student branches, and rightly so. Its meetings, which are varied and flexible, are aimed to help the student teacher with any problems she may have. Highlights of the year, which were offered to the whole student body, brought to light new and interesting trends in current education. There was a discussion meeting on waste material, important in the light of today's needs; an assembly talk by an illustrator of children's books; a public interview between a superintendent and a student, which gave helpful hints to those anxiously awaiting placement; and an Information Please program at which A.C.E. presented a board of professional experts, who willingly answered many of the why's and wherefore's of teaching. The outstanding events were the state conference held at Starved Rock, Illinois, and the annual conference at Buffalo, New York. National's representatives returned with much information and material. They were greatly stimulated by discussion groups and contacts with noted educators. With the valuable information given them by the Association of Childhood Education, National students crossed another stepping stone into the teaching profession.

DRAMATIC CLUB

Curtain going up to review the year's activities of the Dramatic Club!

Dissection of a real fish was a major operation performed by this group. They created from this dissection "The Magic Fishbone", which charmed the Demonstration School early in the fall.

Daytime nightclubbing at the Panther room was another gala affair to chalk up on the calendar. To add to their social prestige one of the club's more vivacious members was asked to dance by several stags. However, as they couldn't supply 14 friends, she declined. To make the day complete, from dizzying heights they enjoyed "The Corn is Green".

The curtain goes down on a scene at the beach, where they concluded the year with a picnic.

BOOK CLUB

Textbooks were secondary on every fourth Thursday, when Book Club met to discuss the latest works of Saroyan or Steinbeck. From the shelves of their growing library members were privileged to choose books to facilitate conversation at any dinner engagement.

Novels were reviewed and digested simultaneously with gooey taffy apples by the club. Lively discussions and games often followed these ripping reviews until each could hold her own lorgnette in any drawing room.

In December Book-Clubbers displayed their domestic talents when they prepared a spaghetti dinner at the dormitory.

Inspired by spring and armed with hot dogs they picnicked by the shores of Lake Michigan, and wound up the year at a luncheon in Chicago.

TRAVEL CLUB

"Around the World in One Year" might easily be the slogan adapted by the Travel Club.

The Club's members traveled to various foreign restaurants. The Yar, Jacques, and Little Bit of Sweden provided variety in their excursions.

A special guest, Anita Gomez, chatted interestingly on the subject of Costa Rica, a travelogue vivid enough to rival James Fitzpatrick at his best. Following the lecture the members participated in some Costa Rican folk dances which the speaker led.

For their Christmas party the club members themselves supplied the entertainment. The Yuletide customs of Bulgaria, Germany, and China were attractively described by representatives of these countries.

The finishing touch was a dinner to honour the graduating members.

INTERNATIONAL CLUB

Foreign and American Students at National continued to be united, in spite of world conditions, through an interest in cultivating international friendships.

Besides sharing their own cultures and customs they went forth to enjoy a Chinese Dragon Festival in Chicago's China Town. They turned National's cafeteria into an Italian Restaurant, transformed its gym into a veritable village square jammed with peppy folk dancers. They lured customers at the Christmas bazaar with articles steeped in foreign flavor.

Miss Sheldon entertained the club at the dormitory for dinner, followed by renditions from three Russian musicians, the outstanding imports of the year. Miss Williams topped it all with a Loop-luncheon in June.

CHOIR

Although less than forty in number this year, the choir has done a consistently fine piece of work. Members were chosen by Miss Westervelt in the fall and at the beginning of the second semester. Credit of only one-half point in the fall was increased to one point at mid-semester because of the additional practices necessitated by the Spring Festival, Baccalaureate, and Commencement.

Reserving the more serious and dignified selections for the latter two occasions, the choir sang songs in a lighter vein, a group of traditional folk songs, for the gala Festival. In keeping with custom, the group sang for the Thanksgiving Festival, and again lent their voices to the story of the Nativity. Even the three hours of practice required each week during the spring were not cause for complaint, for the girls found time to sing in April for a superintendents' conference.

GLEE CLUB

Singing for enjoyment was the main activity of the Glee Club, and the only requisite for membership was a love of singing. Assuming a dual role, Miss Risler was not only an accomplished accompanist but also the successful sponsor of the group of twenty. Probably the thing about which the songsters were most proud this year was their presentation to the library of a year's subscription to the Etude music magazine, conceded to be one of the finest of its kind.

In March the Glee Club entertained at an interesting assembly. It took the form of a make-believe tour, including on the program songs of the southern states, Cuba, Mexico, and South America, accompanied by appropriate pantomime.

There were other special occasions at which the girls sang during Christmas week, as well as at the Book Fair, the White Elephant Sale, and the Hobby Show.

The Club's membership consisted of college graduates from all walks of life; teachers returning to brush up on new teaching methods; students from other countries; and last year's graduates for specialized work and teaching courses.

Favorite topics for discussion were: current trends in education; the place of the teacher in the world situation today; and comparison of experiences in other colleges and universities. In addition to contributions by the members themselves, they were hostesses to interesting and stimulating speakers who brought them inspiration for their future work.

ATHLETICS

The sport light of National gleamed brightly this year, and enthusiasm for the varied program was at a high pitch. Much of this enthusiasm could be attributed to the admirable efforts of the Athletic Board, which consisted of a conscientious Athletic Chairman and four very helpful class representatives. Whenever the representatives could be rounded up the Board met and discussed schedules, tournaments and other plans to appease National's sport lovers. After the board meetings, pep talks were given at class meetings by the representatives and soon the sports program was under way.

The turnout this year was especially large and all classes vied for the cup, which was awarded to the class with the most points for the season's work. The points were awarded not only for victories but also for the largest number of participants present at each event. Although the classes were quite evenly matched as to ability and spirit, the final winner of the cup was the Sophomore Class.

Athletics this year were concentrated on the three B's: bowling, basketball, and badminton, but other sports also received recognition during the year. The season started with a bang with the annual fall bowling tournament. The two tournaments proved to be not only exciting but also amusing, for many green horns were initiated into the sport. Often, too, the source of amusement, the beginners put the old-timers to shame. However, whether a beginner or an old hand, no one regretted the use of her Saturday morning for the bowling tournaments.

The first tournament was won by the seniors, who excelled in bowling scores as well as in setting the girls out for the sport. The sophomores then paralleled the seniors' feat by winning the second tournament in the same manner. The first "B" then went out as gaily as it had come in, to make way for its successor, basketball.

Many a precious nail was broken during this season, and many a shin bruised, but few complaints were heard, for many an unwanted pound was also lost. Games were played Mondays and Tuesdays at five o'clock, and the first tournament commenced early in January. Forwards and guards donned their flashiest shorts and shirts and dived into the fray. Never were there more thrilling moments than during these contests. One game was not won until after two overtime periods had been played, and then victory was determined by only one point. Finally, in spite of valiant guarding by apponents, the Sophomore Class came forth as the winner of th's contest.

Term papers, projects, and exams were soon forgotten in the interest of the February basketball tournament. The last game, which decided the winner of the period, really had the spectators wide-eyed. Near the end of the last quarter time was called and the juniors were then ahead of the sophomores by one point. In spite of courageous attempts to overcome this one point lead during the last three minutes of the game, the sophomores bowed to the juniors. This climaxed weeks of exciting games, and after mutual congratulations the two co-champs tucked away basketball togs for another year. The third "B", badminton, then swished along in March and April. In spite of ye olde spring fever, fans rallied and lots of fun was had by all. This ended the reign of the three "B's", and soon other sports activities took their places.

Those who were not quite energetic enough for bowling, basketball, or badminton, found solace in playing ping-pong; super-energetic souls released part of their inexhaustible supply of ambition in playing tennis or in swimming at the Lido Pool in Evanston. With Dan Cupid doing his share, archery fans demonstrated prowess with the bow and arrow. The season then came to a dramatic close with a Play Day for all, held on National's beautiful green play field. Everyone was well occupied, for choice of activities ranged from jacks to baseball.

The diversity of activities offered by the leadership of the Athletic Board, and the wonderful sportsmanship of all National girls made the sports year of 1941-42 a highly memorable one.

FESTIVALS

THANKSGIVING FESTIVAL

Solemnly our nation gave thanks in a year when the rest of the world seemed to have forgotten its blessings. The Thanksgiving Festival reminded all of those significant beginnings on the rocky Atlantic shores, when the Pilgrims landed seeking religious and political refuge in a country that belonged only to the Indian.

The powerful Redman taught these white men how to survive in this great new land and helped them in the first harvest—synonymous with Thanksgiving Day.

Through the many years that followed, a new youth arose in a new country. With ever-increasing boundaries, youth grew strong and eager, finding vitality and courage in Faith and Education, which closely united the country in thankfulness for its great endowments.

In hope.

There is a faith that binds them all.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL

In a manger, in a far land, a baby was born, and thereupon a star shone in the heavens—a star brighter than all the rest.

The children danced on the village green, heard the strange music and the voice of the angel, and they were sorely afraid. They saw the gleam in the heavens and they knew the Christ Child was born. They followed the star, and carried with them a baby lamb as a gift for the baby Jesus.

Shepherds in the fields saw the star, and their eyes were filled with wonderment.
Across the desert came three kings and servants bearing costly gifts for the child.

The procession slowly entered the stable gate. The kings, the servants, and the children knelt by the crib and paid homage with the gifts they had brought. And the baby slept as Mary sang a lullaby.

In love.

In awe the children watched. . . .

THE MAY QUEEN

Pat Price reigned as the seniors' choice of May Queen. There was no power behind this throne; only love, admiration and joy. To the seniors the disclosal that Pat was May Queen came as a fulfillment of a long-time dream. To everyone she appeared beautiful in splendor, to the seniors she represented more than beauty.

Both her classmates and dormitory friends have known her in executive capacity. The entire school has benefited from her leadership in College Council. At this culminating occasion cries of approval denoted lasting appreciation for Pat Price.

THE MAY FESTIVAL

Ducks practice conga.

May Festival at National is as eagerly anticipated as is spring. From dreary February days to the middle of March the great event slowly took shape. The Festival Committee planned and replanned until finally the ideas were approved and sent to the creative dance department, where the girls worked vigorously and tirelessly, creating appropriate moods and expressions for the four entirely different acts.

Soon the tryout sheets were posted on Miss Mount's bulletin board, where the girls signed up for desired parts, which ranged from dramatic parts in "Force" and "Education" to parts of ducks and cows. After tryouts and a few changes, final placements were made and rehearsals began in earnest. Associated with rehearsals was the ringing of the doorbell on a Tuesday night; after many minutes of waiting some bare-footed, scantily clad member of the cast would finally open the door. Aching limbs and stiffness also accompanied the workouts. Along towards April the rehearsals became more and more frequent, and the routines were all completed and finally put together.

Meanwhile all classes were most concerned with the two great elections for Festival honors. First of all, the seniors voted for the May Queen's court, which was announced in April. This was followed by the all-important balloting for the May Queen by all the upper classes. The result of this voting, however, was kept a deep dark secret until the Queen appeared in the last act of the festival.

Then, too, the pageantry class and Miss MacLennan worked frantically on costumes and color schemes. All the girls were soon measured, whether for lamb costumes or for May court costumes. This meant more work, as each member of the cast played a dual role, that of actress and seamstress; each girl was responsible for the sewing of her own costume. This amateur wardrobe committee turned out admirable pieces of work.

Flirtatious chorines from the Polka

Still another group of Nationalites were kept busy helping Mrs. Taylor plan the scenery and lighting midst busy rehearsals and the tinkling of Thelma's piano. The costumes, dancing and music all contributed to the expression of the ideas of the Festival.

The Choir, attired in lovely pastel evening dresses, came from the balcony and stage entrances and set the mood for the entire Festival. With a varied musical program, the songsters rendered their selections with unusual skill, creating a lovely picture as they clustered informally and gracefully at one side of the stage.

Frovolity was the keynote act of the Festival. The Polka, which was the opening scene, was a delightful dance with daintily attired young misses in long dresses who pivoted demurely about the stage. Suddenly, they reappeared, wearing frothy ballet skirts with a new, delightfully flirtatious step added to their dance. This modified strip tease, the flouncy skirts and saucy steps, met with the audience's hearty approval.

THE MAY FESTIVAL

Quite in contrast to the Polka was the next part of the Festival, which had a much more serious theme. Appropriately it was based on the world situation of today and the hope of tomorrow. The girls portrayed the power of force over freedom of people in industry, agriculture and learning. However, the spirit of worship or faith triumphed over force and partially released those enslaved, from the bonds of force. The coloring of the scene was dynamic. Force attired in red and black vied with Freedom in vibrant yellow against a background of the blues, greens and browns of agriculture, industry and learning. These faded into the greyed depths of worship. This scene was extremely powerful and gripping, as it was based upon the broadest theme ever attempted for Festival. The music, the movement, the lighting, and costumes all contributed to the force of this act.

The Barnyard scene which followed the dramatic number not only added humorous relief but also satirized human foibles. The Farmer had quite a typical crew consisting, as usual, of one lazy member who dozed in the background for most of the scene. The old grey mare was quite in evidence, as were the contented cows chewing their cud and the squealing pig. Frisky little pink-eared lambs frolicked happily in the fields until their black sheep brother came and stole the show. The ducks were there too, waddling a sophisticated conga in all web-footed glory. The hen house was represented well, with the foppish rooster, the blasé rooster, and Mother Hen with her brood of sophisticated and adolescent chickens. The whole barnyard scene was attuned to syncopated rhythms of the day and produced much laughter and enjoyment.

The culmination of the whole Festival was, of course, the May Queen scene, in which after many weeks of suspense the identity of the Queen was revealed. The scene was an elaborate, formal garden with neatly trimmed trees and flower designs in the background. This year a unique note was added, as the attendants brought the Queen, resplendent in shimmering silver, on the stage at the beginning, midst the cheering and bowing of her court. The Queen was then led to her throne, from which she majestically watched her court dance around her merrily. This was a most fitting climax for one of National's most lovely traditions —The May Festival!

OFF THE RECORD

National Defense

A glance across the court revealed deep blackness, a glance at the clock revealed that it was eleven p.m., and without looking at the calendar it was remembered that Consumer's Week rules read: "Lights out, radios off." And so darkness enveloped the dormitory. To the chorus of female voices singing "Yankee Doodle Ain't Doodlin' Now", patriotic experts knit on army sweaters. Their less conscientious sisters knit argyle socks by candlelight. Only a few offenders turned their radios on again at eleven thirty, with the feeble excuse that there was something about "Moon River" that kept up one's morale.

A news flash informed them that some official was considering a cur-few for all working girls and the chagrined Nationalites snapped the buttons, swept the beds clear of books, and somehow managed to crawl in between the sheets.

A trim Red Cross official easily persuaded intellectuals to turn seamstress. The feather-stitch soon changed blue squares into blue baby blankets. And as they worked they mused as to whether they preferred college, the married state that usually accompanies blanket making, or if there were a definite attraction in defense work for women.

It would simply be a restatement of government appeals to enumerate the articles collected in the dormitory and in the girls' homes, piled in confusing array and finally hauled

A Red cross official distributes blankets.

Defense donations.

Tongues and needles clicked in unison in the Town Girls' room as the girls knitted for war relief. The conversation sometimes touched war time topics, but more often, the usual college-centered subjects were under discussion, as fingers flew or fumbled along.

Frequently, a letter post-marked "Free" was pulled from a bulging note book and part of its contents were generously shared. Even the routine at some far-off army camp or naval station seemed exciting in comparison to the small somethings they were doing at home. But the girls had been reassured that they were doing their parts.

So they continued to:

- build a "wall of books" and then tear it down for distribution to service men;
- flock forward in assembly to buy defense stamps, as Mr. Graham and Dr. Johnson shouted separately of their identical values, in auctioneer fashion;
- play bridge for the benefit of the Red Cross;
- obey the clean plate policy during Consumer's Week and follow eat-less-sugar rule during the entire semester;
- help Chicago Boy Scouts sort useful material;
- wear with pride the insignia of U.S.A. service men;
- and to keep chins up, stomachs in, and eyes ahead!

MASTER ENGRAVERS TO AMERICA'S SCHOOLS

TRADITION

For more than half a century Pontiac has been producing QUALITY printing plates for all types of publication work and has established a reputation for dependable service which is unexcelled among photo-engravers. Everywhere Pontiac yearbook service men have become known for their friendly, helpful assistance and are recognized for their ability as specialists in the school publication field.

It has become "An American Tradition" for schools to select Pontiac as their engraver year after year, with the result that the number of annuals handled by Pontiac has steadily increased. Hundreds of these staffs have developed distinctive books with the assistance of Pontiac artists and have gained recognition for the originality and success of their publications.

The entire personnel of Pontiac Engraving & Electrotype Co. salute the publishers of this book for their splendid efforts in producing a fine yearbook. They invite other schools to join the thousands of satisfied Pontiac clients for assistance in the solution of their engraving problems.

Pontiac served as the Official Engraver to this book.

PONTIAC ENGRAVING AND ELECTROTYPE CO.

812-822 WEST VAN BUREN STREET, CHICAGO, ILLINOIS

Dear Helen,
I'm glad this isn't two years from now, because this won't have to be so far I hope you have a super-summer summer, and don't forget to write after. And I wish you'd come to see me this summer if you have Saturday's off. No doubt will both of you have them --- if not be looking forward to seeing you then --- if not before!
Lots of love
Beth

Dear Helen -

It's been fun living across the hall from you - come see us
lots next year - That goes for this summer too - anytime in Milwaukee, remember me.

Love
Schultz
